constant raises, and I get complaints.

What about this?—DUMB-BUNNY

Dear Dumbbunnies: I don't encourage asking for raises. An employe who believes he is not being adequately compensated and thinks he can do better elsewhere should leave and prove it.

If you feel underpaid and unappreciated get another job. Then go to your employer and give him notice. If he offers to match your new salary, refuse. The employer who is placed in this position usually feels slightly black-mailed and the situation is seldom very good after that.

Dear Ann Landers: Is it possible to feel a strong hatred for someone you love?

I love my husband yet there are times when I feel I hate him because of things he has done to me that are not right. After I get over the hurt I love him as much as ever.

I read somewhere that if you love a person you love him ALL the time, and that nothing can ever change that feeling. If this is true then I'm not really in love.

Please set me straight. I am—FOGGED UP

Dear Fogged: Many conflicting emotions are separated by the breadth of a hair. As laughter and tears can be seconds apart, so it is with love and hate. Only those about whom we feel deeply can evoke strong emotions—so don't feel guilty about transient feelings of hate.

To learn the difference between a marriage that "settles down" and one that "gets dull," send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "What To Expect From Marriage," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.
